

Just because gratuitous sex and vile language seems to be popular with some segments of society and accepted by others, doesn't mean that public media should feel compelled to bow to the lowest behavioral common denominator. What's wrong with seeking to elevate the thinking of the population served?