

I feel we have a responsibility to police our media in such manner that the youth of our country are not inundated with vulgar or unsuitable language or visuals while at an impressionable age. The young should have the opportunity to enjoy their youth without the burden of adult (sexual) activities right in their face (so to speak). Better they should be learning to socialize in a moderate and manner suitable to growing in a manner where there are choices that do not force a proclivity to the coarse, vulgar or perverted prior to their attaining adult status. Character and ethics are good building blocks for the youth of our country (or any other).
