

Dear FCC

I am a teacher, a mother of four, a graduate student, and a proud Navy wife. I have seen, heard, and likely even said things not acceptable in many aspects of my life. I have always sided with the right of the whole to show what they want on television or to play what they want on the radio as I have the ability to turn the channel. HOWEVER lowering the standards to allow MORE nudity and the F-word can only serve to create more instances where our children are no longer allowed to be children, where consequences do not matter, where telling our children to "wait till marriage" will not matter, and above all it is morally degrading to women. I am saddened that you would consider this in a country where women have worked so hard to be seen as more than mere sex symbols. I am not a prude in any sense, and respect the rights of others, but if respecting the rights of television to show breasts during the hours when our impressionable 9 yr old little girl is awake is shameful, ethically and morally wrong. Yes I could change the channel, but this is not just the cable channels we are talking about, these regulations would make it possible for the "main stream" media to show this stuff. Please reconsider this choice and realize that instead of being so lax in our rules we should actually tighten the reins a bit and allow our children to be children for a bit longer.

Thank you,
Stephanie Morris
