

Hello,

I support changes to FCC rules that would disengage it from the dubious role of censoring the public airwaves. The notion that the government should take responsibility for parenting children is hostile to the principles of liberty and freedom upon which the United States were founded. In addition the notion that the government is responsible for monitoring and legislating the morality I wish to see or to expose my children to is condescending in the extreme and un-American by any definition.

Thank you,
