

I oppose any changes to the current FCC indecency standards that would allow television and radio stations to broadcast expletives and nudity on the public airwaves, even if brief or "fleeting."

The Supreme Court has confirmed the FCC's authority to enforce policies regarding expletives and nudity, especially during times when children are likely to be watching or listening.

I do not consider this an infringement on the rights to free-speech or the media, because if walking around naked in public would get me arrested, then showing a picture of it should incur the same penalties. There is nothing said with vulgar language that cannot be said without it.
