

I am opposed to the FCC relaxing the decency standards for public radio and television broadcasts. The current policy has been declared to be constitutional by the U.S. Supreme Court and there would be no public benefit from mitigating this policy.

The FCC was created, in part, to protect the public. The content that could be included in the changes you are considering could be detrimental to younger viewers and others in your audience. I hope the FCC will continue to fulfill their obligation to the taxpayers of this country.
