

The addition of profanity and nudity to television programming is an undesirable move. My family and most of my friends families will be forced into a position of removing television access in our homes. Children do not need any more exposure to these things than they already have. Profanity and nudity, in most cases, are not only disruptive and disturbing, but are completely unnecessary and pointless. Even if there were no children in our home, we will make drastic changes in our television viewing should more profane language and nudity be permitted on network and local stations. The amount currently allowed is already unacceptable.
