

Lowering the standards on profanity and nudity will further erode the family values that have kept our nation great. As adults, it's our duty to protect our children from explicit language and nudity until they reach an age when they have the cognitive development and emotional maturity to make responsible decisions for themselves. I am asking the FCC to continue to care for our children in a way that helps protect their innocence and their youth. Please do not lower the current standards in regard to profane speech and nudity during the hours that children are most likely to be watching television.
