

I totally support the FCC's proposed ideas for change. US airwaves have too long been controlled by the "beliefs" of groups like the American Family Association. US airwaves should join the rest of the world. Bowing to the whims of groups like the AFA tells people that the narrow mindedness of a tiny fraction of people can control what a nation sees. And that is messed up. PLEASE ignore the AFA's latest "call to action" email campaign. It has to be up to the individual parent to decide what and when a child views. The FCC and TV are not parents, or babysitters. If a parent gets offended, it's their own problem for letting little Billy watch Law and Order at 10PM or whatever. Changing the channel or popping in a G-rated DVD is not that hard.
