

I am for the change. Relax the standards. Cursing and nudity are too commonly accessible in 2013. The sheer amount of exposure to those elements available outside the broadcast arena via YouTube and the rest of the internet makes censorship efforts on those elements appear outdated as well as somewhat draconian. Broadcast TV wants to do everything it can to keep up with the Internet.