

As a parent of elementary school age children I am disheartened to hear that the FCC is considering lowering the current broadcast decency standards. Isn't it enough that the B* word is being used and sexual scenes are more prevalent now than ever before? You must know that parents and caregivers are forced to work even longer hours now in order to support their families, which in turn often means that children are left to watch tv and listen to radio as a form of babysitting and entertainment. Consequently, this means that they are exposed to whatever you as the FCC allow to be shown and heard through broadcasting. Please do not lower the standards. Thank you.
