

The current standards are outdated and easily manipulated by a small number of vocal extremists (re CBS and the infamous "nipple" slip.) The government should not censor broadcast material. If enough people object to content, the provider will make any changes that are necessary to its commercial survival.