

The level of profanity and nudity on television is certainly high enough, not only for teenagers but for the majority of adults who merely wish to view the news, commentaries, programs, and movies without the sense-offending indecency of shock value visuals and vocabulary. Please, reconsider changing any rules in this area. Also, remember how influential the media is in this country and embrace your responsibility. Do not merely point fingers at parents and schools when discussing decency; the FCC too must share the burden.
