

As I grew up in the 50's and 60's, first my parents with me, and then my wife and I with our kids, regulated what was acceptable television viewing. As a pastor said in our church, the TV has a switch, if I don't like what is on, I can change the channel or turn it off. I think that is a legitimate way to think. It is up to individual viewers to decide what is acceptable viewing material. Let us decide what we choose to watch, we do not need government oversight. With the internet and cell phones, everything available for viewing, by anyone is available. The programming is for entertainment, art and expression. Let us choose for ourselves what we want to watch.