

I feel strongly that the FCC should not relax its policy on expletives and nudity on broadcast TV and radio. I am also a firm supporter of the 1st Amendment (and the whole Constitution, for that matter), but the 1st Amendment was never intended to give indecent speech free reign - it was primarily about the freedom to express political, philosophical, and religious ideas without fear of suppression from the government. Expletives and nudity have nothing to do with "free speech".

It is becoming increasingly difficult for parents to monitor and control what their children are exposed to - I sincerely hope that the FCC will maintain its good work to keep the airwaves relatively free of indecent content.