

Decency matters to a society. To families. To children.

The latest brain research is proving the addictive powers of pornography are as detrimental as cocaine and just as destructive to society and families. Families are being broken apart. Why on earth would you even consider relaxing all that is decent and worthwhile? It has nothing to do with free speech anymore. Where can I have the freedom from filth to raise kids up in a world where marriages last and moms and dads will be faithful and loving? It used to be America. The country founded on religious freedom because God was important to the immigrants who came here.

Please, in the name of all that is good and right, in the name of the innocent children born and unborn for women to stop being objectified as sex-objects, please drop this and listen to a mom who wants a better world for her kids to grow up in where love and family are still values and the glue to any successful society.
