

I just found out about the motion to lessen the severity of language and nudity violation penalties on TV. I'm very disappointed in this. I do not have children yet but we are planning on having them soon. I feel it is my responsibility to speak out against lifting penalties on nudity and profanity. It is more and more difficult to teach healthy sexual behavior. These important healthy principals are already mocked and degraded on TV as it is. Although healthy sexual behavior may no longer be scared for some people. The human body and sexuality are very scared for many and nudity and profanity with crude language is offensive to have broadcast where my children have access to. If you allow this then yes you will be perhaps getting more money from big TV sponsors but you will be betraying the rising generations of children that will not learn to keep certain things sacred and then end up with a more likely chance of being depressed because they are caught in addictive and degrading behaviors. Perhaps this is what you want so that you can continue to receive more money from sponsors that are selling the filth to addicted generations.
