

As parents of young children, my husband and I plead with the FCC not to lower but to raise the standards by which programming is judged and rated. It's very difficult to find any age appropriate content anymore. What is allowing vulgar language or nudity going to do to make it any better?

Bad behavior isn't acceptable in schools, sports, or even the general public. Why should programming, in essence, promote it? I was always taught- if you can't say something nice just don't say anything at all.

Please HELP PROTECT the impressionable minds and spirits of America's youth. Thank you,
Mendy Eskew (ABJ '90 Grady School of Journalism, University of Georgia)