

I am adamantly opposed to the FCC lowering the rules regarding profanity and nudity on television during what is considered family viewing time. Although I am concerned regarding grandchildren (mine and everyones) I am equally interested in preserving this area of "safe listening and viewing" for myself. I WANT and NEED to have a time to relax and enjoy programming free from being ASSAULTED by things I find offensive to me and my peace of mind. I would expand the rules to include violence as well. To reduce the standards because there are too many complaints would indicate you should increase the standards. Does one raise the speed limit just because everyone is speeding and the police cannot issue enough tickets?
