

Each day in 7th grade my social studies teacher made it a point to say, "In America, your rights end at the tip of my nose.". It made a huge impact on me. My grandchildren have the right to come to my home and watch television u without the threat of that medium violating their innocence. The family (and home) is the primary protection for children and shouldn't be influenced by nudity, foul language or violence. The FCC is the guardian of that protection and needs to maintain the standards of decency that will protect the family.
