

Today's television has become extremely non-family friendly. With shows like "The Bad Girls Club", "Jackass", and "Keeping Up with the Kardashians", there is no morals being portrayed on television.

The thought of removing the ban on swearing and nudity would cause the total loss of morals in America. Children are already being exposed to sex and foul language when they leave the home. Do we need to allow them to get access to it by turning on the television? Think about what kind of society will be created if that happens.

The solution is not to eliminate the ban, but to thicken it instead. Right now, the ban on nudity and swearing is as thick as a milkshake. The ban needs to be as thick as concrete. No swearing, not even a**, sh**, bi***, da**, or anything of the like. Even terms like dyke, slut, whore, ni****, or any other derogatory term should be banned.

Should the FCC decide to remove the ban, the FCC might as well put Howard Stern on Nickelodeon at 4pm.
