

The sexual content, depiction of violence against people and profanity is already egregious and has no real place in public. The networks have hijacked our public airwaves and are delivering unsuitable material in program content. Instead of loosening up MORE, the public deserves better. The FCC is supposed to monitor explicit profanity and nudity and keep it off the airwaves. Television is something children may view and it is damaging to expose them to corrupting influences through the eye and ear gates. Adults don't want filth either. The FCC must exercise due diligence and put a lid on it, not open Pandora's Box.
