

Allowing Comcast to continually add charges to its billing for things like digital to analog conversion boxes should stop. Boxes that started off being "free" suddenly turned to $24.00 per year per television. Why can't the FCC seem to get control of this? Is it what Comcast contribute politically from funds paid by us suckers using their products? Allowing the customer to select the channels they want to purchase in their contract should also be on the top of the FCC list of control over this monopoly utility.
