

It is truly disturbing the FCC is even considering changing the guidelines for television. What is our world coming to? Who are you trying to appeal to? The media and Hollywood? Shouldn't you be upholding the morals and values this nation was founded upon? Isn't that what we rely on the government for? To protect and fight for the people even when it may not be popular with the celebrity vote? It's no wonder people are getting rid of mainstream television and cable, they don't want or need the filth it brings into the home. It's hard enough to avoid it out in the world. The home should be a sanctuary and television should be meant for wholesome entertainment purposes, not a medium that exposes children to filthy language and pornographic images. I hope those involved in the decision making process will consider the impact this change will have on their children and grandchild and the future of this country.
