

I strongly oppose the relaxation of standards relating to language/profanity, sexual content, violence, nudity, drug use, homosexuality, and racially offensive language. In my opinion there is no reason to relax these standards for "entertainment" value. Such relaxation erodes the accepted public norms upon which our society is based. Entertainment productions can depict more extreme activity and/or language as normal or socially acceptable which then translates to change in behavior to the society.

Relaxation of standards result in a negative or deteriorating change to social acceptance of such human behavior. Why do anything to take our society in a negative direction?

Steven L Jackson