

I have recently heard that the FCC is considering dropping a ban on the f-word and nudity on television. I would like to voice my discouragement on this issue. It is getting to be ridiculous that I can't take my children into a public place without hearing curse words- now if this passes they could hear it in my home despite my efforts to keep it out of my home.

So on that note "I am against any changes in the present FCC indecency standards that would permit television and radio stations to broadcast expletives and nudity on the public airwaves, even if brief or "fleeting."
