

I oppose any changes to the current FCC indecency standards that would allow television and radio stations to broadcast expletives and nudity on the public airwaves, even if brief or "fleeting."

The Supreme Court has confirmed the FCC's authority to enforce policies regarding expletives and nudity, especially during times when children are likely to be watching or listening.

Relaxing the current policy would not serve the public interest and I urge the FCC to reject all proposals that would allow for the broadcast of expletives and nudity on FCC-licensed stations.

I don't use profanity in my household at all! My parents didn't, I don't, my friends don't. Not everyone who watches TV wants to hear crass profanity, vulgarity, gutter talk. Nor do we want to see people performing sex or being nude! There are other more intellectual ways of getting the point across to the public.

As a mother I try to teach my children the difference between right and wrong and Respect for ourselves and others. One of the ways respect is shown is by a person's language. Use of Foul language is not only disrespectful not only from the person speaking but also to the people who can hear the speaker. Do you really want to hear 3-5 year olds dropping the F-bomb because they heard it on T. V.? It's already hard enough to teach children manners and keep them out of jail because of drugs and murder because T. V. Says it is okay so why should they listen to parents? Not to mention that Respect for the body is shown by covering it.
