

Decency standards for television should remain as they are or if anything be more restricted. They should certainly not be loosened. Many people don't want their children, or even themselves, to accidentally be exposed to inappropriate television. In my opinion it's ridiculous that the FCC is even considering loosening regulations so much. Please consider carefully any changes and possible repercussions. I would never pay to watch anything where I or my children could encounter anything that would garner worse than a pg13 rating. Thank you.
