

I oppose any relaxation of the standards for profanity and nudity on television. Not only do I want to protect our children from these offensive elements, I do not want to see or hear them myself. A creative writer or producer can find other ways to get their message across. There is so much crudeness in the world, there should be some place where those who do not want to hear profanity or see nudity can turn to. Those who are not offended by these things have plenty of other options. The rest of us do not.
