

With already lax standards for media, a motion to further lower them is a negative and detrimental whim. The voice of a few who have a degrading obsession towards portraying immorality has already damaged the moral fabric of media. The majority who don't want immorality portrayed to children or adults alike must make their voice heard. If by sad happenstance these standards are allowed to be lowered, cable and satellite providers will most hopefully be effected by even lower subscription numbers. Please, please clean up our media.
