

In my opinion, censorship of any form is unacceptable. The airwaves are public. Why should the government be allowed to control what speech goes over those airwaves? I understand the desire to limit adult content to adult audiences. With modern TV rating schemes and the filtering available on every television, parents have easily accessible tools to prevent children from watching inappropriate content.

This proceeding specifically addresses accidental and fleeting indecency. I think relaxing the standards as proposed are a good compromise. Punishing clearly accidental profanity during live broadcasts seems especially unnecessary. I support the effort on the part of the FCC to reduce wasting time and tax dollars on fleeting and accidental violations.
