

I wanted to voice my APPROVAL of the FCC relaxing its current policy of censoring what it decides to be "inappropriate" content in radio and television broadcasts. As a strong believer in the first ammendment, I would like to see the FCC get out of content regulation altogether. If anybody feels a particular program or show is inappropriate or immoral, they are welcome to not watch it.

The FCC should not be making content-based decisions for everybody, as not everybody agrees on what content is or is not acceptable to view. In today's secular society, it is patently un-American for a government agency to tell U.S. citizens and television stations what they are allowed to view or broadcast based on some singular definition of morality borne from puritanical Christianity. It's time to let the people decide what they do or don't want to watch.
