

Concerning #13-86, I vehemently encourage the FCC to uphold the laws already in place by issuing penalties to violators in a more strict and timely fashion. It is not in the public's best interest for the FCC to "dumb down" the standards in order to facilitate acting upon complaints. The mere volume of complaints already in the system attests to the fact that most Americans think there is already TOO MUCH profanity, vulgarity, and nudity on the public airwaves. It makes no sense, therefore, to ease up on the already insufficient decency standards.

Let the FCC do what it has been appointed to do and be the guardian of America's airwaves, rather than look for ways of getting around this important responsibility. Let greater efficiency, expediency, and the cutting of proverbial red tape be the answer rather than being lax in duties.

Sincerely,
Sandra Heaton
