

I can think of no way that lowering standards and further coarsening the content of material broadcast in America will improve our country. There is still an expectation of decency in most communities, and I would encourage the FCC to consider protecting rather than neglecting the concept of decency in its actions.