

I do not support any lifting of the restrictions in place as so many of today's television shows already push the envelope at a time when many children are awake or being put to bed, if they were channel surfing or the parent there are already big problems especially with CBS. They have already shown a threesome with chest nudity on Two and a Half Men in this current season.

Allowing full frontal nudity means they could get away with letting that sheet slip and making an already awkward moment horrifying for parents.

Television is already pushing the envelope and we don't need another drop in standards.
