

Allowing the f-word, the s-word and nudity during daytime TV hours is unnecessary and it's hard to believe that it's even being considered! This is taking things too far.

I fear for the unsupervised children who are given access to the TV remote. Do we want our children to think that using foul language is "normal" and would be acceptable in school classrooms, in interactions with law enforcement, and one day, during job interviews? Would you hire someone for whom every third or fourth word spoken was an expletive?

By enacting the aforementioned changes, you are setting children up to fail to conduct themselves properly in society and, for the ones too young to understand right from wrong, or too young to understand the ramifications of habitually being foulmouthed, you are displaying behavior that is NOT deemed to be appropriate/normal/acceptable behavior in some circles.

If your reason for inserting these words and images is to boost low ratings, why not get writers and directors for shows who do quality work that can be entertaining and draw in a large audience WITHOUT being unnecessarily vulgar!
