

It is perfectly O.K. with me if the FCC ignores brief nudity and profanity on non-cable channels like ABC, NBC, CBS and Fox, even during primetime.

Any kids who happen to be watching programs displaying brief nudity or profanity have heard worse on their playgrounds, and seen worse either at home, in magazines, or on the internet.

Parents need to talk their kids about profanity and the human anatomy in their grades school years. Occasional swear words and minor nudity during primetime hours on TV will not be shocking to kids. Most TV's have 'Parental Controls' on them and fearful parents need to use them if they do not want their kids watching programming they do not approve of. End of story.
