

I am firmly against the FCC weakening enforcement of indecency standards on T.V. Current rules against obscenity, indecency, and profanity already leave too much room for broadcast networks to pollute television, in my professional opinion as a clinical social worker. These laws being as they are, their enforcement is the responsibility of the FCC. Do your duty, as a commission to the public, and investigate all complaints, including backlogged ones, and imposing consequences accordingly! This is your responsibility.
