

To Whom It May Concern:

I vehemently OPPOSE any relaxation of standards by the FCC. Television has already become so overwhelmed by sex, profanity and other lack of morality that is almost un-viewable by many in America. If a company can't make a show enjoyable without sex, profanity and other lewd content, then they don't deserve to make television shows.

Even major film makers, it seems, have finally come around to thinking that you don't have to fill the screen with flesh and profanity to sell movie tickets. Compare many movies released during the 1980s and 1990s (which seemingly were all filled with profanity) and there are now no less enjoyable movies, yet there are more movies that are for the most part "clean."

Jonathan Bailey

Bauxite, AR 72011