

Dear Sir or Madame,

I am writing in regards to the FCC loosening the rules as to what is broadcasted during the hours that children and families watch television. I implore you to not loosen the rules and allow more distasteful content onto the television during family television viewing hours. I am a Mother to 8-year-old triplets, and I am already struggling with trying to raise my children to be responsible adults with morals. Loosening the FCC rules and allowing more nudity, sex, violence, and profanity into more television programs will just make my job as a parent that much more difficult. All over the television are people behaving badly, and in doing so, obtaining fame and fortune. I do not want my children to think that the way to get ahead in this life is to behave badly.

Currently there are very few television shows we'll allow our children to watch. We often only tune in to programs on cable, such as the Home Improvement channel or Animal Planet. Channels where I know I don't have to worry about what they are watching. We have also had to resorted to recording very old programs, such as I Love Lucy, The Brady Bunch, and Eight is Enough.

Please do not change the rules. Please protect our children and families.

Thank you for your attention in this matter,

Kendra Rozic
Mom to 8-year-old triplets
3601 Merrick Street
Houston, TX 77025