

Network television and broadcast radio already possesses an excessive ability to promote and glorify sexually explicit behavior, violence and drug abuse. Relaxing the existing restrictions even further is in no way conducive to the public interest and can only serve to erode further the moral standards of our youth. Allowing this proceeding to pass undermines one of the most basic responsibilities of the FCC which is to regulate the public broadcast portions of the spectrum in the best interests of the American PEOPLE and NOT to the commercial or financial benefit of the broadcasters.
