

I could not agree more with previous complaints I have read. I reject the idea of relaxing limits on profanity and vulgarity on television during hours in which children are likely to be watching television programs. If I'm not mistaken, we have already become more lenient on profanity in recent years based on what I've seen in evening hours on channels such as Comedy Central. And now every "reality show" is full of bleeped-out profanities, at all times of day mind you.

I have to agree with another comment recently posted. I live in the United States of America. We are supposed to be the greatest nation on Earth, a beam of light to the rest of the world. Instead, we are becoming as secular and ambivalent as what I've seen in other parts of the world, especially Europe. We are not Europe. If I wanted to live in a seemingly godless society, I would move there. But then again, we already take God's name in vain on television enough here.

As another person said, our country has been headed down the dangerous path of immorality for years now, especially the last five.

Even though I am not a parent, I ask that you please protect the minds and lives of younger generations and do not relax restrictions on profanity and vulgarity. There is no good to come of it.
