

I find it incredulous that a Federal agency is even considering weakening the already slack standards for television viewing. As a parent, we are constantly battling the violent and sexual influences that now stem from a society with no regard for any sacred boundaries to protect the innocence of our children. With the violence and smut currently on cable and TV, it is no wonder we are raising a generation of predators! As a Federal agency, your role is to uphold the standards, not rewrite them due to pressure from broadcasters or their unpopularity with those profiting from the "sale" of sex and violence. Good grief, is no one willing in our government to do what's right, even when it might be hard?!
