Comment: I am responding to the FCC's request for comments on possible changes to its broadcast decency policies that are due on May 20, 2013. I oppose any changes to the broadcast decency standards that have been enacted by the Congress. The FCC should not weaken them to allow even fleeting instances of profanity or nudity. The Supreme Court has recognized the FCC's authority to prohibit indecency during hours when children may be watching. Relaxing these standards will only lead to greater vulgarity and sexuality on broadcast TV.

Comment: I am responding to the FCC's request for comments on possible changes to its broadcast decency policies that are due on May 20, 2013. I strongly oppose any changes to the broadcast decency standards that have been enacted by the Congress. The FCC should not weaken them to allow even fleeting instances of profanity or nudity. The Supreme Court has recognized the FCC's authority to prohibit indecency during hours when children may be watching. Relaxing these standards will only lead to greater vulgarity and sexuality on broadcast TV. Families will be turning their TVs off and may even be getting rid of them. They should not be forced to make this decision based on the FCC not properly doing their job and stooping to new levels of "low". Families still want to view family oriented things during family hours. The option to view profanity or nudity is already available on cable channels. Leave something decent to be viewed by families together.

As a parent of young children, relaxing the standards would prevent me from watching broadcasts in order to protect the innocence of my children. The minds of American people are the most creative and can certainly come up with watchable and entertaining shows without the base content.

This is 2013 NOT 1913. The FCC needs to update their policy to reflect modern reality. Non-sexual nudity and occasional profanity is acceptable.

Comment: I am responding to the FCC's request for comments on possible changes to its broadcast decency policies that are due on May 20, 2013. I oppose any changes to the broadcast decency standards that have been enacted by the Congress. Standards are low enough already. Please don't lower them any more. There is no reason to allow nudity or even fouler language on TV. If writers can't produce a good show without resorting to such vulgarity, then they need to consider a different field of employment.

Please do not lower the standards. They are low enough already. Thank you for taking the time to read my comments!

For those artists and consumers who want more transgressive fare, there are plenty of alternatives for them to go. The public airwaves do not need to be one more avenue to provide it, to the harm of those who wish to avoid exposure to themselves and their children. The Federal Government has a compelling interest in providing an avenue for decency for families who wish to instill the highest virtues into their children, who will then be less likely to become burdens to the State, and more likely to be productive and participatory citizens of the Republic.

The Supreme Court has recognized the FCC's authority to prohibit indecency during hours when children may be watching. Relaxing these standards will only lead to greater vulgarity and sexuality on broadcast TV.

I am responding to the FCC's request for comments on possible changes to its broadcast decency policies that are due on May 20, 2013. I oppose any changes to the broadcast decency standards that have been enacted by the Congress. The FCC should not weaken them to allow even fleeting instances of profanity or nudity. The Supreme Court has recognized the FCC's authority to prohibit indecency during hours when children may be watching. Relaxing these standards will only lead to greater vulgarity and sexuality on broadcast TV.

I am outraged by the current amount of nudity, sexual innuendo and general content of the television programming. I can barely allow my daughter to watch television without monitoring it for offensive language. I cannot believe you are considering allowing even more offensive matter to enter our homes via the airwaves.

I do not believe that allowing more nudity or the increased use of profanity will in any way improve the quality of entertainment on our televisions. Why is this necessary" I would like wholesome, moral entertainment for my daughter, but instead it seems that profanity and sex are the two main ingredients producers look for. Please do not allow more of these things to come into our homes.

Comment: I am responding to the FCC's request for comments on possible changes to its broadcast decency policies that are due on May 20, 2013. I very seriously oppose any changes to the broadcast decency standards that have been enacted by the Congress. The FCC should in no way weaken them to allow even fleeting instances of profanity or nudity. The Supreme Court has recognized the FCC's authority to prohibit indecency during hours when children may be watching. Relaxing these standards will only lead to greater vulgarity and sexuality on broadcast TV, and it is my belief that it is already out of hand.

Relaxing these standards will only lead to greater vulgarity and sexuality on broadcast TV. I can scarcely stand to watch regular TV programming any longer. There are constant sexual scenes, innuendos, vulgarity, violence, and crude humor. How degrading this is. Is our society really so void of decency. Uphold decency as defined by Congress. While you're at it, please stop the commercials for women's underwear, sanitary pads, erectile dysfunction, etc. Kids don't need to see this garbage. There is a time and a place for everything. Network TV isn't the time or the place. If people are really that depraved, they can subscribe to a cable channel that spews that type of trash. Keep it off of Network television.

Years ago, I attended a briefing by an FCC Commissioner, who told his audience that, when complaints come into the FCC about language or offensive broadcasting, they are handled FIRST by young men and women, most of whom are not married and have absolutely NO understanding of how concerned parents are about the coarsening of our culture. Consequently, many complaints are never sent "up the line" for consideration by the Commissioners. Such a process would only worsen under the proposed loosening of standards. As it is, offensive language (such as S.O.B.) and homosexual characters and relationships are regular occurrences on much of network TV, which makes my family look for more wholesome entertainment elsewhere.

The IRS is currently in trouble for using its power to pry into / affect the lives of American citizens. I would hate to think that yet another government bureau is contemplating the same behavior....

The Supreme Court has recognized the FCC's authority to prohibit indecency during hours when children may be watching. Relaxing these standards will only lead to greater vulgarity and sexuality on broadcast TV.

I am responding to the FCC's request for comments on possible changes to its broadcast decency policies that are due on May 20, 2013. I oppose any changes to the broadcast decency standards that have been enacted by the Congress. The FCC should not weaken them to allow even fleeting instances of profanity or nudity. The Supreme Court has recognized the FCC's authority to prohibit indecency during hours when children may be watching. Relaxing these standards will only lead to greater vulgarity and sexuality on broadcast TV.

Comment: I am responding to the FCC's request for comments on possible changes to its broadcast decency policies that are due on May 20, 2013. I oppose any changes to the broadcast decency standards that have been enacted by the Congress. The FCC should not weaken them to allow even fleeting instances of profanity or nudity. The Supreme Court has recognized the FCC's authority to prohibit indecency during hours when children may be watching. Relaxing these standards will only lead to greater vulgarity and sexuality on broadcast TV.

Comment: I am responding to the FCC's request for comments on possible changes to its broadcast decency policies that are due on May 20, 2013.

I very strongly oppose any changes to the broadcast decency standards that have been enacted by the Congress. The FCC should not weaken them to allow even fleeting instances of profanity or nudity. The Supreme Court has recognized the FCC's authority to prohibit indecency during hours when children may be watching. Relaxing these standards will only lead to greater vulgarity and sexuality on broadcast TV.

We do not need any more vulgarity or sexuality on broadcast TV. There is too much now.

Comment: I am responding to the FCC's request for comments on possible changes to its broadcast decency policies that are due on May 20, 2013. I am opposed to any changes that would allow more profanity and any nudity during the time children would be watching tv. There have been good reasons why the regulations were set up as they were, and I definitely oppose changing them.

I have children in my house that don't need to see such things and would appreciate decent TV shows.

Visual images promote strong emotions and behaviors. It is detrimental to encourage any sexual interest within children when the primary audience targets families.

Relaxing these standards will only lead to greater vulgarity and sexuality on broadcast TV.

I am responding to the FCC's request for comments on possible changes to its broadcast decency policies that are due on May 20, 2013. I oppose any changes to the broadcast decency standards that have been enacted by the Congress. The FCC should not weaken them to allow even fleeting instances of profanity or nudity. The Supreme Court has recognized the FCC's authority to prohibit indecency during hours when children may be watching. Relaxing these standards will only lead to greater vulgarity and sexuality on broadcast TV.

I am very disappointed to think this would even be considered by anyone or any entity.

Thank you

As our nation's morals have declined, it is easy to see the direct correlation with what is continually being taken in on TV. Please don't continue this downhill slide by making things even worse. Many are already no longer watching TV because of the offensive content now available.

Comment: Are you kidding me"" This is actually being entertained"" There's too much garbage on the idiot box as it is! You can't get through a commercial break without at least one Cialis commercial, never mind the ads that are run for more salacious programming outside the so-called "family" hours. My kids are 9, 11, and 15 and I'm fighting an increasingly hostile environment for decency, self-preservation, and common sense. Have you sat down and watched the line-up on any given night lately" Please, just give me one more reason to chuck Time Warner and Directv out the window, I'm sick of paying for crap programming intended for the bears-of-little-brain, with no redeeming value at all. Is it any wonder we have teenaged rapists posting their filthy deeds on facebook and youtube" We're shocked that kids are charging into schools with loaded guns" The entertainment industry is a cesspool, sex and violence its bread and butter. Do your job and protect your constituency and our children. You've done an abysmal job in the past two decades. Time to pick up your game, and you can start by trashing this absolutely asinine proposal.
