

I want to formally disagree with any consideration to further degrade the value of television by permitting more indecent subject matter and language. I find it reprehensible that while watching a children's Christmas show on ABC Family that one of the advertisements actually used the words "Do you want to have sex?". I have an 11 year old and 8 year old. I closely monitor what they watch and while I am less than thrilled with most of the choices out there for their age bracket (about high school kids, aimed at elem school audience), to think that programming could go further downhill is inexcusable. I understand that Hollywood feels their First Amendment rights are being restricted - but I have a right to raise my child in a decent environment and pandering to their sense of moral values is not what I consider to be for the "common good" of the American people.
