

The FCC has the moral responsibility to represent and enforce content that is appropriate for all viewers and uphold the standards of decency that is clear to any reasonable person for such an audience. Failure to do so will undermine the value of the FCC and erode the standards of decency for society.