

I would not like to see an easing of the rules that limit profanity and sexual behavior in broadcast media. While I believe the human body to be a beautiful thing and to be respected, many times the media promotes sexuality as to promote disrespectful and lewd behavior. While an argument can be made for free speech and everyone is responsible for themselves for what is done with content viewed, we all know that we have major social problems related to such a loose attitude. Social problems include such things as overuse of alcohol and there are many commercials that sell alcohol by exploiting sex. We have a major problem with unplanned pregnancies and the following that proceed from it which include single parent 'homes' that many times are poor and unstable, children growing up with greater propensity to not finish school, to use drugs and to end up incarcerated. And don't let us forget that what I consider a travesty-abortion. On the last you may not agree based on your beliefs but the effects of abortion obviously to the child-death, and to the mother can be devastating.
