

sprint just called me to let me know that's the FCC I'm in trouble because of my roaming minutes and several other truck drivers in this country move the goods you used by citizens every single day we need to have communications to talk to our companies to talk to our customers and talk to our families and thanks to the FCC we're going to be crack down on and have our service is cancelled simply because the FCC according to sprint isn't forcing rule to where they can't let the roaming go on other companies towers to any excess over 800 minutes or somewhere within that affect varied by company. this is outlandish we have to make communications with our company with our customers and with everyone else involved in the truck driving industry you take away our ability to do that and lose our services imagine how much how many trucks are going to make it on time and are going to communicate that they're broke down in the middle of nowhere or some serious injury is falling them simply because the FCC doesn't like the roaming on the phones
