

Secretary Dortch,

RE: CG Docket Nos. 03-123 and 13-24

Dear Sirs of the FCC and Government of the USA,

It is significantly and vitally important to the Deaf and Hard of Hearing (DHH) world to have Captioning phone calls. Most of the Hard of Hearing (HH) world can not hear on phones with the volume at its highest capacity level. The Deaf (D) world needs Captioning to hear with their eyes. It would be detrimental to many in the DHH world if they can't use the caption calls. The hearing world does not have the compassion or the patience for the DHH world; the hearing world desires that the DHH world function the same as them. That can not be possible if you determine to take away the captioning. That is basically pushing a form of segregation back into order and that is morally wrong. It is said, that you claim it cost too much. I beg to differ. There is so much more money being spent on pointless and valueless things that don't add any significant value to the human life. The cost of captioning adds to the human life at high significant values, for example, jobs- being able to communicate with those in the hearing world. I find it unsettling that the government has even considered something that is of so importance and of such a high value to life for the DHH world. If there are worries about money then look at the grants that are being giving for things of meaningless value. The captioning is a very vital and significant part of the every day life for the DHH world. Please have compassion and understanding and reconsider keeping the captioning for the DHH world. Do not segregate because if you take it way that is exactly what you will be doing. Thanks you. Yvonne Dodd
