

Our nation is becoming coarse and insensative, devolving down to its base nature. The military is one of the last bastions of decency, honor, integrity and self-sacrifice; qualities that made America superior to other cultures. Lowering the (already low) standards of decency will expedite the course to self-destruction.

Please uphold--or strengthen--our moral standards in broadcasting. TV, newspapers, magazines and Hollywood play a large role in the forming and developing of the views and standards of morality, especially for our young people. No wonder our society is falling apart; just look at what we publish and show on TV.
